Permanent Link to Network-free location tracker features u-blox GNSS receiver
2021/06/22

Photo: LynQ U-blox is collaborating with LynQ, which developed a location tracker that doesn't use cellphones, networks, apps or monthly fees. By syncing up the devices before heading out, group members can find each other within a five-mile radius and link up again. LynQ surpassed its fundraising target on the Indiegogo crowdfunding platform, raising more than $1.5 million, and is now on pre-sale. The device uses the u-blox CAM-M8Q GNSS receiver, a GPS/GLONASS/BeiDou positioning module with an embedded antenna. With its slim size of 9.6 x 14 x 1.95 millimeters, it is easy to integrate it into handheld devices, u-blox said. The first generation of the weather-proof tracker uses long-range, low-power radio frequencies to connect devices. Up to 12 people can join a group, split up, and use the only button on the clip-on device to toggle through the group members and find out in which direction and how far away each one is. LynQ's crowdfunding success shows the extent to which the company's founders uncovered an unmet demand on the market. While smartphone-based solutions to locate friends and family, for instance in a crowd, abound, they are limited by the availability of mobile network reception. LynQ's location tracker helps friends regroup outdoors or at crowded events, parents keep an eye on their children, and caregivers watch over the safety of people with special needs, elderly family members, or loved ones suffering from diseases such as Alzheimer's. The tracker has been field-tested on numerous continents and in most topographies and use cases. "We found the u-blox CAM-M8Q to be the best solution for us to achieve the requirements our use cases demand," said Drew Lauter, COO at LynQ. "We're extremely price sensitive, yet we need a highly dependable GPS module; u-blox worked closely with us to deliver that." For u-blox, accompanying LynQ in the development of its product has been an exciting adventure, said Suresh Ram, president of u-blox America. "We're thrilled to see how well their idea has been received by the public and look forward to our continued collaboration in the future."
